PLAN TO REDUCE NEW HAMPSHIRE LEGISLATURE

If It Isn't Done State House Must Be Enlarged

MEMBERS NOW NUMBER 402

Constitutional Convention Now in Session Proposes to Submit Reduction of Amendment

Concord, N. H., Feb. 4.—New Hampshire is in danger of losing its claim to the distinction of having one of the largest representative legislative bodies in the United States. In the hall of the House of Representatives in the capitol are 421 seats, and at session of the legislature the House has 402 members.

But the constitutional convention now in session has voted to submit to the people a constitutional amendment whereby the membership of the House would be materially reduced. Under this plan representation of towns and city wards would be based upon the number of votes cast at the election preceding that at which the representatives were chosen.

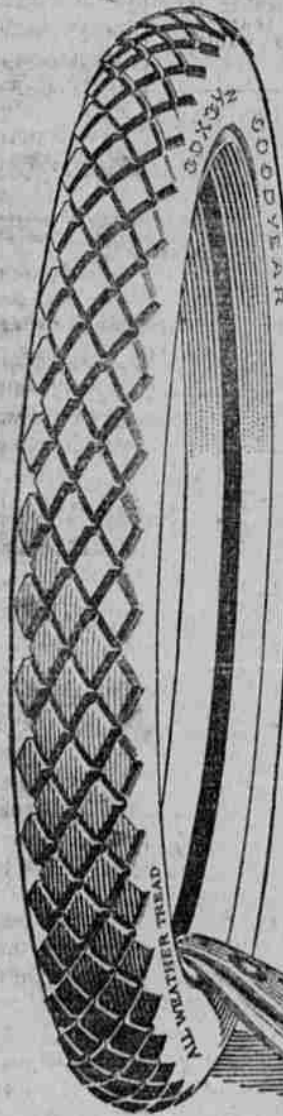

The framers of the present constitution of the Granite State endeavored to give the people of every mountain and hill town a voice in legislative proceedings. They decreed that at every session of the "general court" or legislature, there should be one representative from each town or ward of 600 or more population, with one additional representative for every additional 1,200 inhabitants, and that towns with a population less than 600 should send a representative and proportionate part of the time as the number of its inhabitants shall bear to 600. Some of the towns "proportionately" represented have less than 300 inhabitants and a few have less than 200.

The city of Manchester, the largest in the state, with a population of about 30,000 has 58 representatives. The State House, which was built in 1816 to 1819, was enlarged in 1864-65 and again in 1909. The constitutional convention delegates evidently saw the need of another enlargement looming up in the near future.
